SATURDAY EVEN'G., NOVEMBER 29.

[COMMUNICATED. Anguish.

Is there a something after death? Oh, grave, enveloped in dense gloom, From thy recluse no sound, no sign, nor knowledge comes;

What a mystery is the tomb!

Wise men there are, and them I sek: One whome I loved; does she yet live? They search, they read ; but from science, Alas, no answer I receive.

The Christian says he knows 'tis so, But I, unable thus to feel, Where can I find the proof I seek; Or who, or what will it reveal?

I know she lived, I know she died; Ten thousand lesser things I know, But what or where to day she is, I cannot tell, Oh, cruel woe! J. W. C.

WAVES OF SOUND. - Experiments prove that sound is simply applying force to the sir which moves in a succession of undulatory vibrations. Every word spoken is a breath fores pushing a column of air from the exterior of the mouth. When sounds are produced in a long organ pipe or a short one the difference is made thus: the vibrations are made slow in the first and quick in the other. Vibrations or waves are one thousand in a second in one, for example, and four thousand in the other in the same second. But wavelets of sound move off in space with equal velocities and both arrive at the ear at the same instant. On the law of accoustics depends the pleasures derived from music. If the notes did not travel with equal speed there would be utter confusion, all harmony being destroyed if one sound arrived too late for carrying on the chain of accoustic vibrations within the ear. But the apparatus for receiving sound and analyzing it so as to derive both gratification and instruction from its impulses on a few threads of nerves finer than the smallest thread ever spun, is one of he curiosities of animal organism.
